Section D — Applicant Character and Fitness

It is proper for a state to require high standards of qualification, as long as the qualifications have a rational connection with the applicant's fitness or capacity to practice law. "Good moral character" entails honesty, respect for the rights of others and for the law, trustworthiness, reliability, and commitment to judicial process and to the efficient administration of justice. The character and fitness investigation process is the method by which the Colorado Supreme Court attempts to ensure that an applicant seeking full licensure meets minimum standards for admission to the bar.

Colorado LLPs and attorneys should be individuals whose records of conduct justify the trust of clients, adversaries, courts, and others with respect to the professional responsibilities owed to them. A license to practice law proclaims to the public that the holder has been found qualified to practice law in accordance with standards imposed by the Colorado Supreme Court, and that potential clients may therefore entrust their legal problems to the licensed individual. Every attorney and LLP applicant must undergo a thorough Character and Fitness Investigation.

If you answer "YES" to any of the questions, please complete the referenced Form related to the question and provide a detailed explanation of the underlying circumstances, consequences, and resolution. Information contained on applications for a license to practice law as an LLP in Colorado is confidential and may be released only under the conditions for release of confidential information established by C.R.C.P. 211. See C.R.C.P. 207.7(2). Lack of candor in responses may provide a basis for the Office of LLP Admissions to recommend the applicant appear for an inquiry panel interview with the Colorado Supreme Court Character and Fitness Committee. More information is available online here about the Character and Fitness process.

The following questions address recent mental health and chemical or psychological dependency matters. The purpose of these questions is to determine the current fitness of an applicant to practice law. Each applicant is considered on an individualized basis. The mere fact that an applicant is receiving support or treatment for their mental health or for chemical or psychological dependency is not, in itself, a basis on which an applicant is ordinarily denied admission to the Colorado Bar. The Office of Attorney/LLP Admissions regularly recommends licensing of individuals who have demonstrated personal responsibility and maturity in dealing with mental health and chemical or psychological dependency matters.

The Office encourages applicants who may benefit from treatment to seek it. As indicated in the Rules Governing Admission to the Bar, all proceedings conducted pursuant to the Rules are confidential, with certain limited and enumerated exceptions. See Rule 211.1.

On occasion a license may be denied when an applicant's ability to function is impaired in a manner relevant to the practice of law at the time that the licensing decision is made, or when an applicant demonstrates a lack of candor by their responses. Protection of the public that will receive legal services underlies the licensing responsibilities assigned to the Office. Furthermore, each applicant is responsible for demonstrating that they possess the qualifications necessary to practice law. Your response may include information as to why, in your opinion or that of your treatment provider, your condition will not affect your ability to practice law in a competent and professional manner.

The Office does not, by its questions, seek information that is characterized as situational counseling, such as stress counseling, domestic counseling, and grief counseling. Generally, these types of counseling are not viewed as germane to the issue of whether an applicant is qualified to practice law.
